

Welcome Note

Dear Colleagues and Friends,

It gives me an immense pleasure to extend my very warm welcome to you all to the European Dermatology Conference, March 20-21, 2019 at Frankfurt, Germany, the home of art and culture scenes.

I extend my cordial invitation to all who have travelled from around the globe to engage in professional discuss here in Frankfurt, Germany.

The conference is designed to bring together the scientific experts and practitioners to discuss their recent research findings in advance scientific knowledge and to encourage networking and collaboration with many associations and societies. The conference will be featured with many distinguished scientists and prominent speakers who will discuss their innovative discoveries and practical applications of those discoveries.

Dermatology is the science that is concerned with the diagnosis and treatment of diseases of the skin, hair and nails. Dermatological research is a vast and it stretches from animal work and basic lab-based research on human samples to population-based studies. The conference includes many interesting and related topics which mainly focus on Dermatology and Dermatocosmotology.

So, I hope you will join the conference with all the most renowned scientists, doctors, researchers, academicians, with a likeminded approach who will pave the path for you to exchange your hidden potentials in the field. All this being bought to you under one roof to amplify your vision in climbing the endless ladder of knowledge in the field of dermatology, taking from the success to even more greater achievements. Follow your passion and let your ambition bring you to success! Enjoy by gaining knowledge.

Looking forward to meet you all at Frankfurt, Germany

Yours faithfully,
